

primarycare
PROGRESS

Tomorrow's Doctors, Tomorrow's Cures®

A: We believe that this is a valuable learning opportunity for students, and that their findings should be shared. We recommend that students meet with leadership at their schools to discuss what they've learned and to bring this knowledge back to their educational institutions. Patient stories can illuminate the flaws in our healthcare system. For this reason, we encourage students to have patients sign a release so that their stories can be shared with educational institutions and with the wider public.